

Best-Air-Filters.com was created as an off shoot of putting an offer and eventually purchasing a new home that failed the air quality test. In a very short time, it was necessary to become very knowledgeable of the various types of air purifiers and filters that were commercially available. Once the house was purchased - with a new air purification system installed - the information gathered became the basis for this web site.

I did not realize at the time, how big of an issue air quality in homes is. With today's construction methods making a home very air tight with little leakage, clean, fresh air indoors is not guaranteed. In fact, without an air purification system installed, the air quality is normally pretty poor.

The purpose of this web site is to provide information on air purifier systems available to consumers in both new and existing homes.
